

Ergonomic Hacks for WFH

Length: 1hr.

Delivery modes: Onsite & Virtual Presentation; Pre-recorded tutorials.

Details: During the pandemic, there has been some very innovative home working set ups. However, there is also a huge increase in the severity of discomfort that this is causing. The most common issues include neck, shoulder, wrist and lower back pain. Some simple changes to your set up can radically reduce these issues.

Whether you are sitting on your sofa, your bed, using your dining table and chair or indeed a garden chair and ironing board (we have seen it all), you will learn tips and tricks to improve the set up. Bring your workstation issues to the session and we will help you solve them, with live demonstrations of how to magically transform your home into a decent workplace (without it turning into an office).

Movement was an unavoidable part of our lives in the past; commuting, walking to the toilet at work, nipping out to grab a coffee or sandwich at lunch, walking the kids to school, rushing from meeting to meeting. Without even knowing it we would walk and move and our working routine would usually be full of natural breaks. But now? We MUST create that movement, and it can feel like a daunting task, but it doesn't have to be.

Content includes:

- Advise on why ergonomics is so critical to home working wellbeing
- Top hacks that you can do to instantly improve your back health
- Useful and important tips for keeping the back, neck and shoulders flexible and pain free.
- A short routine, done on a bed or the floor - recommended daily exercise to treat or prevent the build up of tension in the lower and upper back.
